Dear Fellow Classmates,

The class of '90 is special to me because we leave our alma mater together--you expectedly, I, unexpectedly. Some of us are apprehensive about what role we will play; others quite sure. But we all have hope--biblical hope, confident assurance that the gifts and callings of God are not subject to recall, that he who began the good work will bring it to completion.

I hope you will remember our 1989-90 year verse. It turned out to be so appropriate. Samuel was turning over the leadership of God's people to another just as I am. He gave them the command to do the only thing that ultimately matters--only fear the Lord." Few late twentieth century Americans fear the Lord. Few evangelicals fear the Lord. But if you fear the Lord you will "serve Him with integrity and vigor." Don't compromise, don't slack off, don't quit!

Why? "For consider what great things he has done." Review what great things you saw and heard at Columbia; don't forget! Then you will "serve him faithfully with all your heart."

May our class of 1990 bring him great joy!

Grace and peace,

Robertson McQuilkin
President

Dr. J. Robertson McQuilkin, president

IN HONOR of Mr. and Mrs. McQuilkin. . . and their lives of selfless giving, love and humility, we the student body dedicate this book.

Although we have not had as much opportunity as others to get to know the McQuilkins, it is the path of unusual faithfulness left behind that reminds us of their willingness to be used of God, and their service for Him here at CBCS. Their faithfulness to the Lord will remain with us in the form of their many contributions to the CBCS family, and it is a testimony to those who cross these paths in the future.

It is with mixed feelings that we see them leave our family, but we have faith in the Lord that He who began this good work in us will bring it to completion in His time.

May all who read these pages be challenged to take the same uncompromising biblical stand modeled before us by these who have led the way.

Board of Trustees...

Our thanks to our board of trustees, who so faithfully look after the needs of this institution.

We are especially thankful to the Lord for them as they have seen the need for, and are working to adjust our school to meet the changing needs of this generation of students.

Student Life

Time is like water. It is something we take for granted, but when it is out of our reach, we long for more of it.

Everyone has the same amount of time, yet some make more out of it than do others. They spend their days running from one event to another, attempting to gain significance in their multiplicity of accomplishments. Others apply themselves to one particular goal, hoping to realize a great achievement in that field.

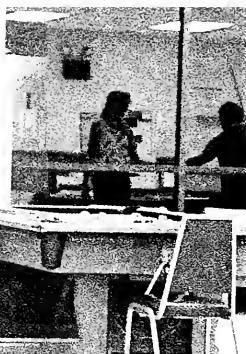

The question is not of the quantity or uniqueness of one's accomplishments in life, it is the qualitative aspect of his involvement. Does one judge his work by the final product, or should his appraisal also include the process involved?

A waste of that precious element now can bring memories that will stick around to haunt us in the years to come, but proper investment in lives will be rewarding both in this life, and in the one to come.

Our relationships with those around us constitute the most important aspect of our time priorities as we go through our lives.

For incoming students, "Welcome Week '89" meant leaving family, friends, secure jobs, and whatever else lay out there in the security of the past. It meant meeting new friends, being stretched, adjusting to the cafeteria food, getting up at 6:15 to cold water, doing PE points, and much more.

There was a lot more than just the physical, however. The other parts of life were emphasized: the social--getting to know others; the spiritual--getting to really know about God and who He is; and the mental--finding out who I am, and what I think.

Ecclesiastes 3:2

Hurricane Hugo swept through South Carolina during the night of October 22, 1989, leaving homes, communities, and lives crushed and devastated. By God's grace Columbia and CBCS were spared, and a few days later, as a gesture of thanks to Him, as well as to show His love, some 900+ CBCS students, faculty, and staff went out to help South Carolina rebuild.

It wasn't all easy or fun. Some of the teams encountered houses with several inches of mud in them, while others battled mounds of trees higher than the houses, mixed with electrical lines and tin roofing.

In the midst of it all, however, the Wego teams were able to learn a little bit about ministry, and they brought some much needed help to an area so ravaged by winds it was described as a huge battlefield.

Most important of all, the workers were able to bring the healing news of Christ in a new way to an otherwise unreached people.

Ecclesiastes 3:3

For the students with spouses and/or children, college takes on a totally new meaning.

Not only is there the aspect of many late nights studying, but the spouse must be able to juggle books, diapers, toys, band-aids, and a myriad of other paraphernalia to be able to cope with the family.

We salute those many who are led through the joys and struggles of family relationships while at CBCS. It is a challenge not to be forgotten: both the rigorous academic schedule, and the joyous and exciting times shared together.

There is a time to accumulate and gather, but there is also a time to cast away, and CBCS went through this process a few times this past year.

There was a felt need for change in the administrative structure of the school, in the way faculty and staff deal with students, and even in the way students relate to each other. After much prayer and planning, a new plan was unveiled, one that would enable students to more closely follow the New Testament church mode of personal accountability and discipleship.

Although the plan was received by the student body with much hesitation, the administration pressed on with the plans.

It has not been easy to make these changes, especially not when it became necessary for some of the staff to leave their jobs, but after much discussion and prayer, it has come to the point that the school has accepted the changes, and we will press on.

and the clouds take on their majestic forms.
I stand in awe at the serene summer's day

I marvel at the beauty of the newly fallen snow

And, as I see these wonders, this becomes my prayer:

"Lord, sometimes it seems that you're just not here, you're not in the midst to make my path clear. I struggle and struggle for one little sign to know in my heart that I'm still on your mind. For I seem all alone and you don't seem near, and the path that I'm on does not seem clear.

But, why have you left me to struggle this way, and leave me alone on these busy days. For this is the time I need you the most. I need the sweet fellowship, I need to feel close, and Lord as I look that gone wrong, it's always at a time when our fellowship is gone.

It's the time I forget to put you first in my day, and sadly I confess I don't even pray. And then when I do, when you've reached down your hand, I come before you boldly, but sadly I stand. I stand at your feet and scarcely can say, Lord, please forgive me for staying away."

The campus was split in two for weeks, with groups of grim men in the cafeteria, planning their attacks.

After all the planning and strategizing, the game was still a matter of muscle and brawn.

deadly quiet fills the air.
Trumpet sounds break through the silence,
warriors leap forth in prayer.*

Profiting

*I could live fully-
But what will it profit if I die to Death?
I could read the Bible thoroughly-
But what will it profit if I don't hear the Word?
I could know every man in history-
But what will it profit to call the center of history
"mere man"?
I could study creation's mysteries-
But what will it profit if I do not recognize its Creator?
I could say with my lips "I am a Christian"-
But what will it profit if my heart knows it not?*

some of their sanity. Or maybe to lose it.

Anyway, it's a great break, and everybody loves it. The M.Div.
students dream about it for weeks, looking forward to a weekend in the sun with nothing to do but daydream.

There's hiking, horseback riding, and this year's specialty: motorized bumper boats! You could spend all day out there bashing those big rubber tubes into each other.

Oh, well it's all over now, but wait, there's a whole year to dream about what to do next year!

Sincerity

*It's so easy to say, "God will provide." It's so easy to say, "God is on your side."
It's so easy to say, "God is Love," when someone else's loved one has died.*

But when it's your own, it's not so easy to say, when your heart with pain groans, "God is Love, yesterday and today." Simple words so often spoken and then forgotten, aren't so easy now to say.

*And yet they are still true.
God will provide! Take that to heart. God is on your side.
It seems impossible, but God is Love, and He also has cried.*

*"My tender heart is hardened.
My gentle eyes are cold.
My conscience has been weakened.
My unkind thoughts are bold.
The fire that has tried me
Has shown some deepened flaws.
For underneath my goodness
Pride holds me in its claws.
I seek for recognition
From men and not from God.
And when I am not noticed
I sink into my pride.
One part of me looks down
on those even who are best.
The other part feels very inferior to the rest.
This arrogance has planted
a seed of bitterness.
My life has become selfish.
Not striving for God's best.
My Lord, I ask forgiveness.
My heart is sad and dry.
I want to be a person
Of great integrity."*

Annette Carter

*Forgive me, Lord.
I did not know
that I was hurting you Please understand
I do love you although I've been a fool.*

*Come change my heart.
It's growing cold
From all my flippant ways.
My attitudes and actions have
Been striving for self-praise.*

*My heart is sad
and heavy now
I see that I've been wrong.
Lord, take my life,
and make me clean,
till all the scum is gone.*

*I need you, Lord.
I see this now
More clearly than before.
Oh, help me, Lord,
live close to you,
and love you more and more.*

Painter of this life for me and might I step off
the easel that it shall never be.*

*For you alone are the artist and you see my life in full and Lord I pray you'll teach me that you're truly in control.
The painting that you have for me at times is truly grim because I took the paintbrush and tried my hand at sin.
I tried my hand at painting and didn't trust your plan and now I give it back to you and truly ask again that you alone would be the artist of this perfect life for me.
and Lord I pray that I would never take that brush from Thee.*

SENIORS

This year has been one of many struggles and hard times for the senior class, but it has produced patience and maturity for the class of '90. The class has been one of unusual unity and friendships, perhaps due to the faithfulness of the class advisor, Ed Germann, and the close involvement he and his family had with the seniors.

Despite the fact that many seniors spent at least one quarter doing their student teaching internship, the class was able to keep involved in many activities, such as Welcome Week, all-school roller-rink nights, Columbia 90, and more.

During spring quarter many of the seniors were "awarded" for their "unusual" activities and involvements: Mike Williams for his singing in the shower; Byron Matthews for his numerous ways of getting dates; Roland Todd for his outstanding chivalry, and many others.

Due to the many structural changes and adjustments made during the year, many juniors went through a lot of changes, finding it necessary to adjust course to keep up with the rigorous demands of education.

The class advisor, Dr. Hislop, was very helpful to the class with his thoughtful advice and encouragement, as well as his involvement and help in class activities. He was of great value in planning many class activities, such as the spring quarter junior class retreat to North Carolina, and the Junior/Senior in May.

The Juniors were able to step out into some new fields, hosting a contemporary Christian concert for the school, and getting involved with the administration in planning for the future. It was very exciting to see the many changes the class went through in the process of being molded into His image.

"This year, the class of '91, formerly the 'social class' of CBC, turned its heart toward missions and the school. Our goal was to have the best representation ever to the SMF, and the most informed and effective SMF project ever. In addition, we moved quickly in planning the Junior/Senior, providing an artist with a recent #1 nationwide Christian song. The class worked toward unity and relationship building with new students and underclassmen in an attempt to keep the Lord's servant's in training here at CBC. The class served in many leadership capacities, and began positive changes in the life of students now and for future generations. We also initiated plans for modernizing the student center. We sought to give CBC students pride in their school as well as in their calling."

The Sophomores were able to get to know each other quite well during the school year, through the help of the class president Tim Jensen, and the advisor Mr. Christiansen. This year's Sophomore Class has been characterized by close friendships, many fun times, and much closer ties with the rest of the CBC family. The class has become very active socially, with the class benefit car wash, the Sophomore/Freshman pizza party, and many other exciting class events held throughout the school year.

During Winter Quarter the class took a weekend retreat to Boone, NC, where they enjoyed ice skating, mountain hiking, and playing games in the cabins.

Events like this brought the class much closer together, and helped them to grow as a body.

Freshmen Life

The Freshman class jumped right into CBCS life this year, with many wild and intense activities both on and off campus.

The class president, Phillip Bradley, pushed for much involvement through retreats, beach parties, a chapel honoring the seniors, and exciting class chapels.

John Krueger and Paula Ehrenberg were the freshmen class Big Brother and Sis until class elections at the end of fall quarter, and they contributed much to the lives of the freshmen.

One activity well supported by the class was the spring quarter hayride and picnic on the soccer field. Many freshmen helped entertain the married student's children, through painting faces, wearing clown suits, etc.

"I don't refer to you as students. . . I refer to you as my young friends."

Ed Germann

This school year has been one of new experiences for the faculty and staff, as the school stood to face many needed, and yet exciting, changes.

It was thrilling to see the heavy involvement of the staff in many all-school activities, such as Operation Wego, the Pig-Pickin', and Columbia '90. Staff participation was usually heavy, and it stimulated close relationships with students, bringing a family atmosphere onto the campus.

Participation in the students' spiritual lives was another way in which the staff members were able to be involved, and it wasn't uncommon to see student and staff praying together over some need, or rejoicing over another miracle from the Lord. Because of this unity, we were able to see the Lord work on our campus in some very powerful ways.

"Life couldn't be better--the North just got another 15 yards." Ed Germann (above) was the play-by-play announcer for the Grits Bowl, and the North did win.

Organizations and Activities

The Coordinating Council spent much time and energy helping the CBCS student body realize the importance of trusting and obeying the Lord everyday life. Through various events, and by bringing in guest speakers, the coordinating council helped us work toward our potential for the Lord.

Vice- President; Calvin Brain - Grad Life Council Vice- President; Betty Ann Overcast - secretary and treasurer; Brian Anders - GLC President; Mike Seltzer - OCSA Vice- President; and Ed Pomelear - OCSA President and Presiding Officer of Coordinating Council.

Co-ordinating Council . . .

The CBCS Coordinating Council kept very busy this year, organizing the various student activities and events, such as concerts, the blood drives, and representing the student body as a whole.

Comprised of various student government leaders, the organization spent many hours in meetings, planning events and policies for the student body.

Due to the many policy changes and adjustments that took place at CBC this year, it was especially important that the leadership be considerate and thoughtful, as well as a spiritually strong group. We thank them for their commitment to the CBCS students.

(Middle) J.P. and his wife-to-be Robyn Grimm with Bob Yount.

Grad Life Council

The acronym LIFE meaning "Living Interaction For Edification" summarizes the general purpose of the Grad Life Council. It is this general purpose that refers to those extra-curricular events that are designed to stimulate interaction among graduate students for the edification of the body in general, as well as the edification of each individual.

This year will also be remembered for its Pizza Hut pizza/KK doughnut Study Break, and the return of CBCS's once-thought-lost mascot, Chompsky.

One other tradition pulled from the attic of CBCS history was the surprise Faculty/Staff Appreciation Day, in which we, the student body, were able to express our gratitude to those men and women of God who so faithfully serve us, the school, and our Lord.

It is our prayer that the Lord has used this year to strengthen each of us to more faithfully serve Him in the years ahead.

Brian Anders

Student Association

The S. A. organized many student events throughout the year, such as the Hayride, the Winter Banquet, and Kidsitting. In an effort to have fun and refreshing activities, and to build unity, many of the S.A. activities were service oriented, such as Kidsitting, where on-campus students volunteered to babysit the married students' children for an evening. The S.A. was also instrumental in the quarterly Red Cross blood drives, and in publicizing the John Guest Crusade.

It was exciting to be on the frontline of the movement that the school is taking.

Πι Γαμμα . .

Pi Gamma, the student wives fellowship, had an exciting year with a variety of events. Our theme, "Bloom where you are Planted" captivated the spirit of each of the meetings.

We were challenged and encouraged by speakers, such as Jack Layman, Dr. McQuilkin, and Linda White. Kim Stumpf

(Top) It was the kids' night for fun, with plenty of mischief and more tricks by Paul Silva.

Off- Campus Student Association . . .

Led by Mike Seltzer and Ed Pomelear, the OCSA held some interesting and exciting events to hold off the monotony at CBCS. As well as working with the Coordinating Council to organize events like the PigPickin', the OCSA worked off-campus, promoting unity and a spirit of fellowship.

Various activities dotted the school calendar, making life interesting both for the off-campus singles, and also for the married students.

Overall, it was a good year of fun and fellowship, due to the spiritual and social leadership of the OCSA.

Residence Counselors

The grad Residence Counselors had positions very similar to that of the undergrad dorm council, in that they planned many exciting events to keep life hopping in the residence halls.

The "Mod Moms" and "Cluster Dads" held some very unusual hall dates and get-togethers to break the "monotony" of grad life.

CBCS Dorm Council . . .

The dorm councils enjoyed a wild and exciting year, with many funny open dorm nights, various skit nights, and movies.

Women's Dorm Council held a special Dean Appreciation banquet for Pattie Stump on her leaving CBCS, and the men had much to say for Dr. Shaver's departure as well.

There were the usual open dorm night skits, and other celebrations, and this year the men's dorms started hosting a weekly informal open house on Sunday evenings.

Through wise planning, the dorm councils were able to purchase various appliances and host dorm parties.

World Christian Week

Challenged by Dwight Smith to be Agents of Grace in four powerful messages on the facts of our Christian life, CBCS once again once again enjoyed the emphasis of world missions.

We realized that we are a people of God, intimately related to the Father, and outward bound in our life of faith so that we can be God's exclusive agents of grace and hasten the completion of God's agenda.

Student Missions Fellowship. . .

This year SMF sponsored its annual World Christian Week, a time for each student to consider his role in missions. Dwight Smith of United World Mission addressed the student body during chapels.

SMF organized Geographic Prayer Groups, an opportunity for students to pray regularly for the part of the world they care about most.

To make a tangible difference in the world now, SMF directed its annual Giving Project toward three evangelical seminaries in Guatemala, India, and Nigeria, raising over $11,000 to send students to these seminaries.

GO'89. . .

For those who were able to go, GO'89 was an excellent weekend of Bible and missions teaching, with plenty of exciting events.

The theme of the weekend was "Whom then will you serve?", with Bob Sjogran and George Murray speaking at the general assemblies on the topic of "If Christ is Lord, then what?".

The GO'89 team: (kneeling) Alan Chanteau, president; Heather Murray, (first row) Tara Gesselman, Jenny Harding, Jessi Platt, Debbie Samworth, (back) Bill Fox, Mark Toney, Tommy Barwick, William Brown, and Glen Burchett.

(below) Ray Austin, Tom Obrien, Clint Gilliam, Willie Iraheta, and Shawn Kelly.

WCBC 83.0 AM. . .

Although the student-run station didn't get much support until later in the year, the talent that was behind it was unusual.

Tom "Sling" Obrien usually started the weekend evenin programs around 10:30 pm, with classic Christian rock to keep things hopping.

Ray and Willie took the week nights, playing mostly contemporary stuff, and trying to see how many call-in's they could get.

Whenever the station wasn't on the air, the Moody satellite program was aired, and most CBC chapels were aired live as well.

Finial Yearbook Staff . . .

The Finial staff enjoyed some exciting changes throughout the year, resulting in a totally new plane of work in our preparation of this volume.

Early in the fall quarter it was determined that the Finial should have a new advisor, and Jim Lassiter agreed to accept that position. Using his expertise at desktop publishing and Macintosh computers, we decided to design and produce the book on computer.

This was a monumental task, but it has been well worth the cost, and hopefully it will set a precedent for the future, and alleviate some potential problems.

As you have looked through these pages, it is our trust that our labor has not been in vain, but that this volume will help save those special memories of this time in your life, and strengthen your commitment to Him.

Soccer

Soccer

Soccer

The soccer team had a very impressive year, with some extremely intense games against some of the other league teams.

Made up of 9 grads and 9 under-grads, half of which grew up outside of the U.S., the team was evidence of God's work in blending the members' together.

There was also much ministry through the relationships built. Two of the games were played at Broad River Correctional Institute, where the team was able to share and pray with the inmates after the games.

"Our season record was 8-2-0. We also played 3 exhibition games, all of which we won. One was against USC -Aiken. They were amazed that just a bunch of Bible students could play at a level of soccer equal to and better than secular universities with all their payed coaches, scholarships, and equipment.

"Most of all we learned to work as a team on and off the field. Teams often commented that there was something different about our attitudes."

David Mulholland

CBCS Soccer . . .

This year's inter-mural soccer season was hounded by a constant lack of class players, especially so in the under-grad teams.

The tournament went to the defending champs, the grad team. It couldn't have been too surprising; the grad team constituted 75% of the CBCS league team, so they had plenty of horsepower to use.

With plans for a few changes in organization of the class teams for the future, it should be as exciting a season as ever.

CBCS Softball Team

Organized both for the fun of competition, and for the joy of a ministry of witnessing, the school softball team had a very exciting year, competing against various group and community teams in the St. Andrews area.

Although the team did not have an exceedingly impressive season, it was a productive one in that the players were able to share Christ with other teams..

Despite many very intense game between the under-grad teams & the faculty/staff, the spring tournament ended in a victory for the grad team, winning 2 out of 3 over the faculty/staff team.

The Grad Singers

This year the Grad Singers has been composed of twenty-four CBS students representing thirteen states and three countries. Under the direction of Dr. David Osterlund, the group has performed sixteen concerts in NC, SC, and FL. In addition to singing in churches, they have ministered in correctional institutions in Columbia, participated in the John Guest Crusade, and they even gave unscheduled roadside concerts while waiting for the bus to be repaired.

Their program this year was arranged around the CBCS year verse, with songs centering on worship, faithful service, and considering what great things God has done for us. In addition to singing, the members of the group have had many opportunities to minister on an individual basis to people who have attended the concerts. Their goal has been to encourage and challenge God's people.

"Look familiar? It's tour, and we're lost again." Mr. Kimura and Mark Smith.

Ambassador Choir.

The Ambassador Choir represents the school's best music ability, and this year's choir certainly proved it. There were usually 25+ members, giving concerts approximately every second weekend, resulting in a tightknit group of students, and an even more unusual director, Mr. Kimura.

The choir was received very well in their concerts in the local prisons, as well as the many concerts held throughout the year.

During spring break, the choir took an eight day tour through the New England states, another great experience.

Streetlight Players . .

The team has travelled to prisons, hospitals, and churches to share Christ and to encourage believers in a dramatic way this year. A new special experience we went through this year was being a part of the Easter team performing a mini-drama about the resurrection.

We were also awarded a certificate of appreciation from the Broad River Correctional Institute.

Πρισμα . . .

The Prisma drama team was started later into the year, as an off-shoot of Streetlight Players. Led by Jimmy Sadler, the group had some very exciting times of ministries, both formally, and also on a personal basis.

There were many fun times together, and, as with many groups of people that spend much time together, the team members often met outside of practices to socialize.

Team members: Tom "Sling" O'Brien, Shawn Kelly, Jimmy Sadler, Dan Sanders, Heather Reader, Ann DeHahn, Raina Thomas, Deb Bostic, Kristin Irwin, and Jennifer Schrage.

CBCS Mime Team . .

This year's mime team has experienced a lot of joy in the engagements, and in the relationships which have developed on the team, as well as in seeing God work through the members.

The team performed at a variety of places - CCI, a Gideons' convention, the VA hospital, the mental hospital, Wil Lou Gray Opportunity School, Birchwood Chapel & Willow Lane, an Easter Team performance, and various other engagements.

"The most rewarding and exciting times have been those at CCI. God is working in that maximum security prison to bring glory to Himself, and to set those men free in the highest sense of the word. It was truly an honor and privilege to be part of His work there".

Cindy Wallace

"His Hands" Puppet Team

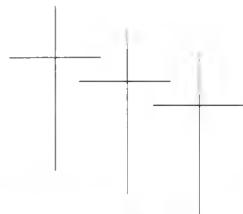

"What a privilege it is being able to serve Christ through His Hands. Puppetry has historically been an important means of communication. The inanimate object suddenly springing to life with human characteristics has long fascinated men. This fascination permits puppets to communicate the realities of human experience in a manner often impossible in other communicative media.

His Hands has two main objectives: To win souls and encourage Christians to live for Christ; and to attain professional quality for the Lord."

Donna Krieger, team director

Field Education. . .

Our field education assignments can either be drudgery, or we can make the most of an opportunity before us. It is our prayer that what we learn now in these ministries will make us able servants.

But it's still there. . .

The ensemble grew in ability throughout the year, and took on a wide variety of music: classical, pop, traditional, and hymns.

During the course of this year as I worked on the book, I studied the concept of time, and was made much more aware of how often we take it for granted. There are many different parts of our lives, from the cradle until we are in our sunset years, and it is all too easy to look to some future point as the time when all will be fine.

This concept negates the fact that our lives are like a vapor, and with one strong wind we could be snuffed out. Our fragility, and the shortness of our lives demands that we fully apply ourselves to a cause that will remain past our own brief lifespan.

Those relationships we now have with our closest friends, especially while we are young and flexible, will be the relationships that will mold our future. The book of Ecclesiastes speaks loudly that there is a proper moment for everything we do, and it is important that we not let this get by us. It is too easy to get caught up in what we are doing, and let our relationship with the Lord, and with those around us slide, rather than keeping proper priorities, and this will be our spiritual downfall if we allow it to happen in our lives.

As you have read these pages may you be reminded again of the urgency of this life, and the reality of the one to come.
